Man falls off boat, drowns

A man drowned after falling off his boat into the Sacramento River on April 28.

West Sacramento firefighters received a call that the victim fell overboard at about 3:48 p.m. He had apparently been trying to tie his boat up to a downed tree limb when he fell into the water.

The man was not wearing a life jacket, according to the West Sacramento Fire Department.

Agencies joining the search included the Clarksburg Fire Department, Yolo County Sheriff, a CalStar helicopter, C.H.P. and DART (Diving Accident Rescue Team.)

After an "exhaustive" rescue attempt, reports the W.S.F.D., searchers went into "recovery mode."

The body was eventually found at about 7 p.m. near South River Road and Babel Slough Road, near the southern West Sacramento city limits.

Mark Persons of the Yolo County Coroner's Division told the News-Ledger that the victim was later identified as 55-year old Joua Kao Lor of Sacramento. The cause of death was determined to be drowning, he said.

Fireworks

The City of West Sacramento has held its annual lottery to see which schools, churches and nonprofit organizations will be authorized to operate a fireworks booth during the Fourth of July season.

The winners:

West Sacramento Little League will operate a booth near Papa Murphy's Pizza, Lake Washington and Jefferson boulevards in Southport.

Campus Life Connection/Collings West Sacramento Teen Center will be in front of Safeway.

Joy Christian Ministries will be outside Wal-Mart.

The West Sacramento Christmas Basket Project will be at Jefferson Plaza.

West Sacramento Community Singers will have a booth near Walgreens and La Bou.

The West Sacramento Historical Society will be at the Southport Town Center.

The West Sacramento Rotary will sell fireworks near Whitey's Jolly Kone near Jefferson and 15th Street.

River City Rowing Club will be in front of Arteaga's Supermarket on Sacramento Avenue at Kegle Drive.

Each group will work with a fireworks wholeseller, and will get to keep some of the proceeds from the "safe and sane" fireworks.

There was a mini-convention for fans of the Star Wars film series, held Saturday afternoon (May 4) at the West Sacramento Community Center. Plenty of costumed characters were in attendance for the show. There were also exhibits and sales of toys and collectibles. The event was sponsored by Toy Fusion and other organizations.

The Facebook page of the West Sacramento Parks Department has some more photos and information about the event. You can find it at <https://www.facebook.com/May4StarWarsWestSac>.

About 600 people attended 'Star Wars Day,' and the parks department hopes to bring the event back next year.

'Cinco de Mayo,' on the river

The Sacramento Yacht Club celebrated the beginning another boating season with an opening day parade on Sunday. The May 5 event was themed for 'Cinco de Mayo,' and many boaters decorated their craft to suit the holiday.

The parade wound its way upriver from the club's boathouse in Southport, West Sacramento, under the Tower Bridge and past the ziggurat building (above) and Old Sacramento.

POLICE LOG

News items below are collected from police dispatchers' notes and arrest reports. The information in them has often not been verified beyond the initial reports.

April 29, 3:58 p.m.

A Walnut Street man called 911. He didn't have an emergency; he just called "to find out who hung up on him." The man said he would need an ambulance later to take him to a hospital, but he refused to take the ambulance service's phone number from the dispatcher. He "said he would call back on 911 for transportation when he wanted to go."

April 29, 7:30 p.m.

A man reported he had just been shot in the back of the leg by a BB gun. He suspected the shot came from a third-floor apartment nearby on F Street, since he had turned in the residents there for smoking drugs. He is now "concerned it is retaliation."

April 30, 1 p.m.

An officer responded to the scene of a burglary on Maple Street. A man with a backpack and bike was seen going into a shed and exiting with a "weed eater" and other lawn equipment. He was caught on the homeowner's video. The officer contacted the 32-year old suspect nearby and arrested him for an outstanding warrant as well as possession of brass knuckles. After being shown the video and read his Miranda rights, the suspect admitted the theft. He went to jail.

April 30, 9 p.m.

Police trying to locate a missing person contacted a 24-year old Clear Lake man on the 1000-block of West Capitol Avenue. The man and the missing person were believed to have arrived at the scene in a Ford Excursion. From that SUV came the strong smell of marijuana. An officer found inside it a total of 78.6 grams of marijuana along with "multiple" prescription pill bottles in the Clear Lake man's name. In a search while being arrested, the man was also found with $858 in cash. He opted not to make a statement after being read his rights, and was jailed.

Route 66 was Mom's road trip of a lifetime

Note: With another Mother's Day just around the corner I am reminded of a wonderful little story my 92-year old mother told me a few years back that ended up becoming one of my favorite columns. It is reprinted below as a reminder to me (and maybe you, too) that "everything we once wanted, was everything we once had". Happy Mother's Day, Mom!

Before my father died, West Sacramento had been home to my parents for most of their 63 years of marriage, having moved here shortly after the end of World War II. With the help of the G.I. Bill, they bought a little tract home on Michigan Boulevard and my father went to work for the Southern Pacific Railroad, where he toiled away for the next 39 years. Anyway, while my mother and I were chatting the other night, it dawned on me that when children reflect back on the lives of their parents, the time frame that comes into play usually begins with their own birth, and more or less covers their years of growing up in their parents' house. In other words, we really do think of our parents "as parents", and often forget that they were young once, too, with hopes and dreams and a whole life still in front of them long before they ever got around to getting married and raising a family.

In my case, I know most of the basic

My Back Pages

By Daryl Fisher

stuff about my mother's youth, that she grew up in a little town in Southern Missouri and that she and her family lived through the most difficult days/years of the Great Depression; that she met my father in grade school and that he was in her life for almost as long as she can remember; that as a young girl she worked in a beauty shop to earn extra money and was always very responsible; and that she adored her father, who passed away much too young from a burst appendix before I ever got to meet him. But other than that, my mother's life before I became a part of it isn't all that well-known to me, and I thought I would start doing a little something about that this past Mother's Day.

"So, Mom," I asked her last weekend, "how did you and Dad get all the way out to California from Missouri after you were married?"

"We drove in a car, silly," she answered matter-of-factly.

"I know that, Mom," I said, "but why don't you tell me all about it?"

"Why?" she asked suspiciously. "And will what I tell you end up in that newspaper column of yours?"

"Maybe," I admitted.

"Well," she said with a smile, "it actually is a pretty funny story."

"How so?"

"Well, you have to remember that your dad and I were just a couple of young green kids back then and we didn't have a clue about what traveling halfway across the country might be like. Plus I had just had my appendix out and the doctor wasn't too happy about me bouncing around in a car all the way to California. But your dad had found work out there so we jumped into an old 1936 Chevy coupe and off we went. And you have to remember that this all happened back in the winter of 1941 and since they didn't have fancy weather forecasts back then, we ended up driving through snow and on icy roads most of the way."

"So, did you stay in nice hotels and use the trip as kind of a honeymoon?"

"Are you kidding? We had less than $75 to make it all the way to California – more like $50 if I remember right – and most of that was going to have to be spent on gas, so we stayed in the cheapest places we could find. And for food we had brought some of my mother's fried chicken with us, along with a pound of bacon, a loaf of bread, and a dozen eggs. And I went and dropped the darn eggs and busted all of them the first night we were unloading the car. So we had nothing but toast and some bacon for breakfast all the way to California. And how we made it through those high mountain passes in all that bad weather I'll never know. Plus when the windshield wipers stopped working I about froze to death hanging my head out of the window to tell your dad what was ahead of us."

When I started laughing, my mother said, "Well, if you think that is funny, you should have seen what happened to us when we finally got through the mountains and all that bad weather and out into the desert just before we got to California."

"So what happened then?" I asked with interest.

"Well, the radiator sprung a leak and started spewing out smoke and water and of course we didn't have any money to stop and have the darn thing repaired. But it got so bad we finally had to find a gas station and ask for help. After this really nice man looked at it and showed us the problem, we told him we didn't really

'Plus, when the windshield wipers stopped working, I about froze to death hanging my head out of the window to tell your dad what was ahead of us. . .'

have any money for him to fix it, and he said he knew of a little trick that would probably get us all the way to Sacramento before the radiator completely blew up."

"A little trick?"

"Yeah, and what he did was go get a big old bar of lye soap and then he started shaving it all into the radiator until he had the whole thing filled up with soap shavings and water."

"You're kidding?"

"Nope, and sure enough, once we started rolling along again, I guess that soap somehow filled in the hole in the radiator and just like he said, we made it all the way to Sacramento."

"That is a funny story," I said.

"But that's not the funny part!"

"There's more?" I asked my mother, returning her smile.

"The funny part," she explained with the kind of warm, happy expression on her face that only comes from recalling a truly cherished memory, "was that all the way from at least Bakersfield to Sacramento our car kept blowing soapy bubbles out from underneath the hood and everyone who passed us – coming or going – ended up waving and laughing at us. We looked like we were on the Lawrence Welk show with all those bubbles coming out of our car."

"Now that is a funny story!" I said.

"Oh, what a trip that was," said my mother, obviously wishing she was 21 years old again, had her whole life with my father still ahead of her, and that they could jump back in their 1936 Chevy coupe, motor out onto old Route 66, and travel every one of those long ago miles all over again.

If you are a creditor or a contingent creditor of the decedent, you must file your claim with the court and mail a copy to the personal representative appointed by the court within the later of either (1) four months from the date of first issuance of letters to a general personal representative, as defined in section 58(b) of the California Probate Code, or (2) 60 days from the date of mailing or personal delivery to you of a notice under section 9052 of the California Probate Code.

Other California statutes and legal authority may affect your rights as a creditor. You may want to consult with an attorney knowledgeable in California law.

You may examine the file kept by the court. If you are a person interested in the estate, you may file with the court a "Request for Special Notice" (form DE-154) of the filing of an inventory and appraisal of estate assets or of any petition or account as provided in Probate Code section 1250. A "Request for Special Notice" form is available from the court clerk. Attorney for Petitioner: Linda S. Patrick 1540 Jefferson Blvd. West Sacramento CA 95691 (916) 371-5780

"Beautiful Creatures"
(PG-13) -- This supernatural teen romance thriller is aimed squarely at the "Twilight" crowd, but manages to rise above its sibling. Ethan (Alden Ehrenreich) is a human 17-year-old who wants to get out of his fictional Southern hometown. He takes an interest in the new girl at school, Lena (Alice Englert) -- a mysterious chick from a powerful and enigmatic family (surprise: they're witches.) Their love is forbidden, and somehow the fate of the world gets caught up in it.

"Beautiful Creatures" stands out among the pack because the young lovers have actual chemistry, not just vacant stares. The pacing is a little sluggish. The movie's mythology keeps changing, and new arbitrary plot twists spring up like dandelions. As far as young-adult supernatural love stories go, you could do a lot worse.

"The Last Stand" (R) -- Arnold Schwarzenegger plays a rickety old sheriff who can still dole out master-level violence when the time is right. When a vicious drug lord stages a spectacular escape from prison, he and his army of thugs make a run for the border. The last stop before Mexico is Somerton, Ariz. -- a peaceful small town under the protection of the aging lawman. It's up to Ah-nuld and his ragtag bunch of townfolk to shoot them bad guys.

Arnold holds up to the ravages of time pretty well. He's (relatively) believable as a police veteran seeking some peace. But this movie is mostly about fighting, and that's all good here. Johnny Knoxville (of MTV's "Jackass") plays a shifty gun nut with an arsenal -- thus supplying the firepower for the big scenes.

"Stand Up Guys" (R) -- Val (Al Pacino) is released from a 28-year stay in prison, and meets up with his old partners in crime, Doc (Christopher Walken) and Hirsch (Alan Arkin). These three old-timers immediately start riffing. Ignore some plot holes and get over a few pacing issues, because the veteran cast is the real draw here -- and they deliver laughs to those who are observant. Walken especially. His dead-pan is impeccable, and as a former mafia man gone soft with age, he gets some of the best lines in the movie.

"Side Effects" (R) -- Emily (Rooney Mara) has a nice apartment and a man with A-list looks (Channing Tatum), but she just can't feel OK. Her psychiatrist (Jude Law) gives her Abilix, an anxiety medication that he's getting paid to prescribe. At first, it's all great and dandy. Things get real dark though, and the opening scene of the movie sug-

Rochelle's had a crush on Noah Flynn for years, but lately he's been acting weird. He claims he just thinks of her as a little sister, the lifelong best pal of his kid brother, Lee. But he's been acting weirdly overprotective, scaring away any guy who shows interest in her and even starting fights with those who get too close.

An encounter at the school carnival's kissing booth opens Elle's eyes to Noah's real feelings about her, and they begin a clandestine relationship. Elle is torn. She hates lying to her friends and family, but she can't give up the way being with Noah makes her feel, even if it means sneaking around behind everyone's back and risking losing Lee, her best friend in the world. With secrets and lies piling up, is there any way to navigate this suddenly crazy life without someone getting hurt?

"The Kissing Booth" treads familiar young-adult ground, but does so with an ease that is all the more notable for the fact that the author is a mere 17 years old. This debut novel displays a natural grasp of dialogue and a keen eye for the seismic shifts of teen emotions.

Elle is a relatable heroine, sharp and a little sassy without being too glib, and generally honest with herself, even when she makes mistakes. Her enviable bond with her best friend Lee is refreshingly free of romantic angst. Noah is certainly no perfect hero -- he's got a rough reputation and a hot, often physical temper, and more than once his controlling behavior edges into the disturbing. At least he is called out on his actions, although perhaps not always as firmly as he could or should be.

Still, this weighty core helps to ground this otherwise light and leisurely novel, a story about following your heart while not forgetting about your head.

Make Time for Reading at the Grocery Store

Many shoppers carefully select healthy and nutritious foods for themselves and their families. And yet, even the most conscientious shoppers might be fooled by fancy food labels that cleverly make consumers think they are getting something better than they are. Some tricks have been around for a long time. Here are some described in the April 2011 issue of Nutrition Action HealthLetter:

Fruit Drinks: Fruit drinks labeled with "100 percent vitamin C" may have plenty of vitamin C, but what else? If a juice is fruit-flavored sugar water or just a little fruit juice, it is missing many bonuses of 100-percent fruit juice. Orange juice, for example, has vitamin C, as well as calcium, iron, phosphorus, magnesium and zinc.

Whole Grains: Marketers know that health-conscious consumers are looking for whole grains. At a glance, the package may say in big bright letters "Whole Grain," but the ingredients show the whole grain as second or third on the list. Ingredients are listed by weight, with the most abundant by weight listed first, so there may be less whole grain than what one might think. However, the claim is not a lie. The package itself says, in fine print, "made with."

Real Fruit: "Made with real fruit" is a claim made in cereals and other breakfast foods. Looking at the ingredient list can reveal that there is fruit in the product, but it may be listed fifth or sixth -- not as much as the shopper might hope. A better choice might be to select the whole-grain cereal or pancake and top it with fresh, frozen or canned fruit.

Omega-3 Fatty Acids: These are ones that can help lower the risk of heart disease -- but not all omega-3's are created equal. EPA and DHA are the two omega-3 fats that research indicates play the biggest part in heart health. ALA, a third kind of omega-3 fat, is the one most often added to foods and touted on the label. Choose to eat fatty fish to get their EPA and DHA.

To make the best choices, consumers must read food packages carefully and look at the ingredient lists. Select a time to shop when you have time to read and compare brands. Once you've read the labels and selected your favorite products, your shopping time will be cut in half because you can select the same brands over and over again.

This recipe for Spanish-Style Cod with Tomatoes adds a hint of spice and Spanish flair by using fully cooked, Spanish-style chorizo, a pork sausage seasoned with smoked paprika and chili, not the soft, Mexican type. Cod that has been sustainably fished -- U.S. Pacific cod or Atlantic cod from Iceland and the northeast Arctic -- is the best to use for this dish, so read the label! Pacific cod, which is nearly an identical stand-in or Pacific ling or Alaskan pollack may be used as a substitute.

(Additional information provided by Janet Hackert, Nutrition and Health Education Specialist, Harrison County, University of Missouri Extension.)

SPANISH-STYLE COD WITH TOMATOES

2 tablespoons extra-virgin olive oil
1 medium onion, finely chopped
4 ounces Spanish chorizo or kielbasa, diced
1 tablespoon poultry seasoning, divided
1 teaspoon salt, divided
1 teaspoon black pepper, divided
1/4 teaspoon red pepper flakes or cayenne pepper
1 (15-ounce) can fire-roasted tomatoes with peppers
1/2 cup chicken stock, divided
1 (15-ounce) can great northern beans or cannellini beans, rinsed
1 1/4 pounds Pacific cod or Atlantic cod, Pacific ling or Alaskan pollack, cut into 4 pieces
1 teaspoon Spanish paprika
Cooking oil spray
1 tablespoon freshly

squeezed lemon juice

1. Preheat oven to 425 F.
2. Heat 1 tablespoon oil in a medium saucepan over medium-high heat. Add onion, chorizo (or kielbasa), 1/2 tablespoon poultry seasoning, 1/2 teaspoon salt and pepper, and the red pepper flakes. Cook, stirring, until fragrant, about 2 minutes.

3. Add the tomatoes with peppers and 1/4 cup broth. Cook, stirring occasionally, until the broth is almost evaporated, 2 to 4 minutes. Stir in beans. Remove from heat.

4. Sprinkle fish on both sides with remaining oil, poultry seasoning, salt, pepper and paprika. Coat a 9-by-13-inch baking dish with cooking spray. Place fish in prepared baking dish.

5. Top each piece of fish with equal amounts of the tomato mixture (about 1/2 cup per fillet). Pour the remaining 1/4 cup broth into the pan and cover the pan with foil. Bake until the fish is just cooked through, 15 to 20 minutes. Serve fish with the sauce spooned over the top. Sprinkle with lemon juice.

The Sacramento River registered two feet four inches, United States gauge at the Southern Pacific bridge yesterday. This reading shows only a slight raise in the stage of the river, although over two inches of rain have already fallen in this section of the state. Plowing has been started vigorously in the West Sacramento district and even some farmers have started to sow barley already. The sixth crop of alfalfa is about ready in some of the fast growing districts of West Sacramento and will likely be saved in a dry period a little later on.

The large drainage pump at the southern end of the West Sacramento district has been in operation since October 24 with the result that nearly all the canals that are used for reclamation and irrigation are nearly dry at this writing. Indeed there are several patches where the bed of the canal is exposed, leaving many fish consisting of catfish, carp and bass stranded. Residents of the neighborhood of the canal are making good use of the fish and are selling some to Sacramento dealers. The fish are perfectly healthy and are sold because during the late summer a plentiful supply of water was in the canals. The pumping at the lower end of the district goes on for only a few hours of each day, permitting the sump to fill with the water in the canal.

The trustees of Reclamation District 900 met at West Sacramento headquarters last night to receive bids on levee repairs that are about to be made at Chicory Bend. At the time the independent bidder could not be announced, nor the amount of the bid for the work.

Al Partridge, owner of the West Side Auto Camp, is in receipt of the sad news of the death of his father in Oakland last Saturday. The old gentleman had spent a useful life and died at a ripe old age, surrounded by his immediate relatives. The funeral was held in Oakland last Tuesday.

Joe Pereira has been confined to his bed for several days of the past week suffering with a dose of "flu." Yesterday he was able to be around the West Sacramento Auto Camp but is still doing his regular grunts.

Eight new houses are in course of construction in the West Sacramento Auto Camp, with four already completed and four more on the way to be finished. Although these additional houses are now being constructed the camp is forced to turn away tourists every night, being unable to house them unless the tourists want to sleep in their own tents.

Fifteen truck owners of the Lisbon district appeared in Judge Barry's court last Tuesday and paid fines of five dollars each for infractions of the state motor vehicle law. One truckman was caught with an overload, another was found with only one license plate, another was found with no signalling device, another was found without headlights, and several were found without tail lights. They had been cited to appear by Traffic Officers George Monaghan and H. R. Jacobs. They paid their fines and promised to sin no more after being admonished by Judge Barry to be more careful in the future.

M'ANULTY WILL ARRIVE IN WEST SACRAMENTO ON NOVEMBER 3RD

One of the McAnulty brothers will start operations in the West Sacramento district on November 3, according to word received by the Independent yesterday.

The work of promotion will not commence until one or two more of the brothers arrive, which will be later on in the month.

The brother who will arrive on November 3 will start preparing offices in West Sacramento headquarters for the work of promotion, but outside work will not be commenced until another member of the firm gets on the ground.

The start made during the past week on the deep well was interrupted for a few days because the head driller was taken sick and forced to lay off. Another man has now taken his place and the crew of drillers will work continuously until a depth between six and seven hundred feet is reached. Two shifts will be placed at work so that if any cave-in of the well should occur it will not materially delay any further work.

Hector McNevin, who has been confined to his home for over a week with a hiccoughing spell, was greatly relieved yesterday. The spasms had partially died down and he was overcoming the spell.

WRITE-IN CANDIDATE E. P. SMITH OFFERS A WORD OF EXPLANATION

In the issue of the Independent of October 24 a promise was made that E. P. Smith, write-in candidate for supervisor from the first district of Yolo County, would be asked to explain his views.

Mr. Smith is a farmer of the Elkhorn district and is also engaged in the real estate business in Sacramento. He is a young man, a live wire, and certainly pretends to know the needs of the district he would represent.

At the meeting of the Washington Boosters' Club last Tuesday evening he was given a few minutes to explain his views, but owing to the lateness of the hour he did not impose on the good nature of those present.

At the school building, last Wednesday evening in Riverbank, an open meeting was held when he was given another opportunity to explain his views.

Speaking to the Independent, Mr. Smith expressed himself as follows:

"I am against any increase in the tax rate only insofar as a tax rate is necessary to keep the affairs of the county in proper shape and in keeping with common sense for improvement and advancement.

"Nearly all reclamation districts in Yolo County are situated in the first supervisor district, and I claim to be thoroughly conversant with conditions surrounding those districts. I have been a resident of one since I came to this section of the state and I believe I can appreciate the trials that landowners within those reclamation districts have to stand.

"I claim that the first district of Yolo County has not secured its share of road building according to the provisions that were promised in the million dollar bond issue passed by the people three years ago.

"My purpose in getting into the board of supervisors would be to see that this district gets its proportion of the road building fund.

"The assessed valuation in the first district is $6,499,993.00, greater, a good deal, than any other district of the county. The second district valuation is $2,907,498.00, the third district valuation is $4,345,000.00, the fourth district valuation is $4,353,085.00, and the fifth district valuation is $4,773,304.00.

"Yet the first supervisor district, which pays more taxes than any other district, has less permanent roads built, and needs more, than any other district in Yolo County.

"I am willing that the Elkhorn road, that is to say that portion between Waldeck's and Elkhorn, should remain unfinished for the time being until other portions of the district are given a passable road. I feel that the state road 'from Coast to Capitol' will eventually be the means of finishing the Elkhorn road.

"I want to see Riverbank get two permanent main roads through the town just as soon as possible, for I believe the people to be entitled to them. I want to see complete highways extended into the lower end of the district as soon as possible.

"Outside of the laudable ambition

STORY OF DISAPPEARANCE MADE OUT OF WHOLE CLOTH

Sacramento and Woodland papers concocted wonderful stories during the past week about the disappearance of J. J. Cahill and wife from the West Sacramento Auto Camp.

In those stories it was represented that Mr. and Mrs. Cahill had left the camp and completely disappeared, leaving their children in a dependent condition without funds and without means of support.

As one paper put it, "Every detective and plain clothes man and every uniformed patrolman in the city is attempting to solve the mystery of the disappearance of the middle-aged couple who left the auto camp ostensibly for a brief excursion to Sacramento."

Cahill and wife left the camp to make a business visit to Napa. Their children were fully aware of their destination and were not left destitute or dependent on anybody.

But the children becoming uneasy at the protracted absence of their parents went to the police department of Sacramento and inquired if any automobile wrecks had been reported, fearing that their parents might have run into an accident. A wily reporter saw his chance to frame a mystery story and he did it.

On arriving at Napa the parents were delayed longer than they anticipated but even before the police had a chance to visit the West Sacramento Auto Camp to make inquiry the parents returned. They have already left for other places in their tourist excursion.

that prompts any man to enter a political race, these are the things that prompt me to become a write-in candidate for supervisor."

Mr. Smith explains that he is thoroughly acquainted with the difficulties surrounding a write-in campaign but claims he has no fear of those difficulties and wants to win.

His opponent, Henry B. Buckingham, won the nomination at the primaries over two strong opponents, W. E. M. Beardslee and Eli Fourness. Buckingham was born and raised in the district and has been a permanent resident of the section during a lifetime of over fifty years. He has also raised a family and is a man of considerable means, owning land in some of the reclamation districts.

Certainly Buckingham will nearly receive the entire vote of the town of Washington and in that particular alone has what is very near the majority vote of the district.

Buckingham declared to the Independent that he is not afraid of the election next Tuesday and welcomes opposition that, to him, is not formidable.

MEDICAL IMPROVEMENT SOCIETY GIVES NOTICE

The Yolo County Society for Medical Improvement issued notice as follows:

"All patients will be charged regular office visits for smallpox and diphtheria prophylactic measures except in indigent cases, which are to be handled by the county health officer with the assistance of the local members of the society."

The above notice has been ordered published in all papers in Yolo and Colusa counties.

YOLO PROHIBITION NO BAR TO DRUNKENNESS

That prohibition is of no avail in preventing residents of Yolo County from using alcoholic drinks goes without saying, for today, yesterday, and every day during the past five years there has been an unending supply of booze in the county.

Indeed, it is an unusual thing to find a farmhouse that hasn't a still or a large supply of wine in the basement.

The Woodland Mail of October 30 brags a good deal in the following article, and the article is resented sorely by the residents of the first supervisor district, where most of the hops produced in the county are raised:

HARRISON GETS $5251 FINES AND FEES IN NINETY DAYS

Over $4,000 has been collected in fines by Justice of the Peace R. W. Harrison from bootleggers during the past ninety days, more than was collected for liquor licenses during the palmy days of Yolo. Harrison has collected a total of $5,251 in fees in the past three months, divided as follows: October, to date, $1,620; September, $2,593, and August, $1,038. The superior court was idle during these times, but promises to have a chance to increase this sum considerably before the close of the year. Of the total sum above $1,050 was collected in Chinese gambling games.

It appears as if the prohibition of alcoholic liquors is only a guise to collect money to be credited to Woodland, the county seat.

Most of the fines for selling liquor were paid by bootleggers of this section of Yolo County, yet the county seat claims the credit for the collection.

OPINION

NEWS-LEDGER EDITORIAL:

Public risk for a private hotel project?

The City of West Sacramento is working on a plan to boost a local riverfront hotel project, and that plan involves some degree of risk to the city general fund. That fund is the pot of money that pays for things like police and fire protection.

The theory is that with some help from the public, a new hotel planned near Raley Field can become an upgraded version of what would happen if developers are left to private financing alone. The hotel would get a conference center and other amenities that consultants say won't happen if the project has to rely only on private financing.

The city's contribution won't — if all goes well — touch your police and fire money. The city will stand behind $30 million in bonds, which will be repaid by indirect income from the future project. The bonds will be paid back with money from hotel room taxes and increased property taxes from the site — money that, without the project, might otherwise not come in at all.

If those future revenues fall short, then yes, your tax dollars are at risk.

Now, it's not the first time that the City of West Sacramento has used public financing to help make a desirable project happen. The same kind of thing happened with the first office tower on the river (the "ziggurat" building, originally built for a lending company) and again with Raley Field, for example.

Those projects worked out. The truth is, that while West Sacramento has a public policy of stepping in with public financing mechanisms or other support to help make a desirable project come true — especially when that project is the "first of its kind" to take a gamble here — the city hasn't gone hog wild with taxpayer money or taxpayer risk. City-backed bonds for Raley Field, for example, are being paid back on schedule as per the deal, without the need for West Sacramentans to reach into their pockets for cash and cover a shortfall. The stadium was a success, and it helped change the image of West Sacramento and its diamond-in-the-rough riverfront.

Now, the particular hotel currently planned for the Bridge District may never even come to fruition. But if it does — and if city participation nudges it to a higher quality project possessed of greater amenities — then the hotel will help raise the bar for the rest of the developing waterfront. The quality of some of the housing, businesses and restaurants going in nearby will go up alongside the business-class hotel, and so might future nearby property taxes, sales taxes and payrolls.

Artist's rendering of the proposed hotel on 2.7 acres next to Raley Field and the Sacramento River (From Hornberger+Worstell, Architects)

You can be philosophically opposed to public participation in private development, and that's fine. But if so, you'll have to recognize that it's going to be hard to accomplish big projects in an urban area — or, at least, in your urban area. Competing cities may not be so ideologically pure, and they may become the places that get the edge for the ambitious projects.

Or, you can recognize that sometimes public involvement in development is a boondoggle. A city's hopes can cause it to financially overextend itself, falling over backwards to make a dream project come true. Then it finds itself bushwhacked by its own overenthusiastic financial projects, or by the surprise of a crashing economy, or by the guile of tricky development partners.

But what if you think that it's sometimes okay for a local government to take a modest amount of risk to make something good happen? Then this hotel project looks like a pretty good bet.

GUEST COMMENTARY:

Light snowpack means it's time to check your sprinklers

From the Regional Water Authority

With last week's final snow survey of 2013 expected to show snow-water content far below normal, the Regional Water Authority (RWA) and local water providers are urging residents to check their sprinklers each month for water-wasting problems and make repairs within 48 hours.

"In the Sacramento region, most water use—and water waste—occurs in the landscape," said RWA Water Efficiency Program Manager. "Sprinklers are exposed to the burning sun, lawn mowers, trimmers, kids, dogs and more—it's no wonder they become damaged or misaligned. And if you water at night or during early morning, it's easy to miss obvious problems—like a water geyser shooting from a broken sprinkler."

The Regional Water Authority recommends that residents designate a day each month to check their sprinklers. Here's how:

1) Turn on your sprinkler system one watering zone (valve) at a time, and walk each zone.

2) Look for water-wasting problems such as:

- Sprinklers that water the sidewalks, street, fence and any other area that shouldn't be watered.

- "Geysers"—water shooting out of a broken sprinkler head.

- Water squirting out around a sprinkler head, which could be a broken sprinkler or riser (the threaded pipe that connects the sprinkler to the pipe fitting below).

- Sprinkler heads that continue to be wet even when the system hasn't run in-awhile, indicating leaking or stuck irrigation valves.

3) Check for runoff (water that runs from the lawn or planting bed and onto the pavement).

4) Check for adequate sprinkler coverage: The spray from one sprinkler head should reach the adjacent sprinkler head for "head-to-head" coverage (meaning that water is distributed equally across all areas of your lawn).

5) Schedule your sprinkler timer: Set individual zone run times according to plant type (turf and plants have different water needs) and adjust your watering schedule at least monthly according to the weather and your water provider's guidelines

6) Finally, repair any problems you find within 48 hours. A properly functioning, well-maintained system will keep your landscape healthy while making every drop count.

Now celebrate a beautiful landscape that doesn't waste water!
